In Dash Upon Battlefields
Of Continent.

EUROPEAN PEACE THREATENED

Russia Orders Mobilization Of Principal Army Corps On Austrian Frontier.

KILLING OF RULERS THE CAUSE

Austria and Serbia went to war Sunday when the Austrian Government gave the Serbian Minister his passports upon the ground that Serbia had made an unsatisfactory answer to the demand for an apology and punishment of the alleged conspirators who assassinated Crown Prince Ferdinand of Austria, in Serbia, three weeks ago. All Europe is threatened with a bloody conflict as a result.

The Austrian army, already mobilized, is moving toward the Serbian capital, bent upon its capture.

Though King Peter, his court and the garrison of Belgrade have fled the capital, the Crown Prince of Serbia is marshaling the army of that country in a desperate effort to save the capital from the Austrians.

Russia, Serbia's ally, is mobilizing an army on the Austrian and Prussian frontiers prepared to battle both Austria and Germany to prevent the former's conquest of Serbia.

The Kaiser of Germany is hastening to his capital aboard his fastest destroyer to give the orders that may send the German army against Russia and Serbia.

In both Berlin and Vienna thousands of the populace parade the streets demanding war.

In Paris thousands of the populace are besieging the meeting of the Cabinet, demanding that France join in the war and rescue from Germany the lost province, Alsace-Lorraine.

General mobilization of troops of Montenegro is ordered. Soldiers are to aid Serbia.

Serbia's reply to the Austrian ultimatum shows the Serbs are willing to grant most of the points demanded by their enemy.

Despite the fact that Serbia has surrendered on so many points, Austria is demanding war.

NEGRO ARRESTED FOR MURDER TEN YEARS PAST

Madisonville, Ky., July 24.—Jno. Adams, alias Tarton Powers, a negro, was arrested here and taken to Owensboro, where he is wanted for murder. The negro was working in the city and had been a peaceful citizen. When the officers approached him and told him he was wanted he acknowledged that his right name is Adams and that he was wanted in Owensboro. He said he had been in Madisonville for ten years and it was not until now he had been molested.

County Board of Education.

The Ohio County Board of Education, convened in County School Superintendent Ozma Shults' office Monday and will be in session until some time to-day. Quite a lot of important business was transacted. The divisions were represented as follows: Division No. 1, O. L. Turner; Division No. 2, T. J. Brooks; Division No. 3, Ira Bozarth; Division No. 4, H. O. Awtry; Division No. 5, E. G. Austin, and Division No. 6, J. L. Brown. Supt. Shults presiding and J. L. Brown secretary.

CONSTRUES TEXT OF BOOK EXCHANGE LAW

Frankfort, Ky., July 25.—Barksdale Hamlett, Superintendent of Public Instruction, to-day issued a rule that under the State textbook adoption, all of the publishers under the Act of 1914 will be required to take up and exchange school books in any condition, provided they are of the same grade.

This ruling is issued to correct an impression that has gone out that books offered in exchange would have to be in good condition. The law specifically sets out that "dealers shall exchange new books for old ones of the same grade, displaced by said adoption, at the exchange price herein provided for, during the first year of the life of each and every contract made under the provisions of this act. All bids and proposals shall set out clearly and specifically an exchange price at which such book or books shall be furnished to pupils and patrons who may have old books of the same subject, and which may be exchanged for new books, and the exchange price shall in all cases be subject to the terms of the contract made between the State and any publisher bidding."

Hamlett interprets the law to mean that the condition clause applies only to such books as are held by dealers on their shelves, which, of course, must be taken up by the contractors at the original net price. On this point the law says: "Such new books as are held in Kentucky now, or at any future adoption, by purchase by dealer, and in good condition, shall be taken in exchange at the original act price by successful bidders from such dealers as hold in stock such books."

ed by said adoption, at the exchange price herein provided for, during the first year of the life of each and every contract made under the provisions of this act. All bids and proposals shall set out clearly and specifically an exchange price at which such book or books shall be furnished to pupils and patrons who may have old books of the same subject, and which may be exchanged for new books, and the exchange price shall in all cases be subject to the terms of the contract made between the State and any publisher bidding."

SHOT HIS SON-IN-LAW DEAD ON THE INSTANT

When He Was Informed Of Daughter's Marriage—
Youthful Sweethearts.

Haverstraw, N. Y., July 25.—Eugene Newman, 20 years old, walked into the office of Town Clerk William V. Cleary to-day and said: "Mr. Cleary, I've come to tell you that I have married your daughter Anna, and that she is waiting in New York until I can telephone your forgiveness."

Cleary pulled a revolver from a drawer and shot his son-in-law dead. Three bullets entered the youth's body. Then he gave himself up to the police, who telephoned to New York and found that Mrs. Cleary had already forgiven the eloping daughter and was with her, awaiting the father's assent.

Young Newman and Anna Cleary had been sweethearts since they were school children. Cleary had always opposed Newman's suit because of religious differences.

The young victim was a son of Fred M. Newman, one of the principal owners of the Rockland County Messenger, and the two families have always been intimate. Anna Cleary and Eugene grew up together, and, far as is known, there was no objection on the part of either family to their marriage when they were older and the young man had gotten a start in life.

Young Newman spent the early part of last week looking for a job, so that he could eliminate everything except his youth when he advanced his reasons why he and Anna should put off their marriage no longer. Though unsuccessful in landing the job, he was successful in obtaining his sweetheart's consent to an immediate marriage. They went to Hoboken where a minister married them.

CHIGGER BITE NEARLY FATAL TO KANSAS MAN

Atchison, Kan., July 25.—While scratching a chigger bite on his right leg last night, Oscar Roth, a young carpenter, opened a vein in his leg and for an hour it was feared he would bleed to death. A physician finally stopped the flow of blood. Roth will recover, but he is still confined to his bed.

Such Is Politics.

Washington, July 27.—Because her husband made campaign and political speeches at night, Mrs. Anna H. Davis, wife of B. W. Davis, secretary to a Congressman from Georgia, has applied for divorce. She claims that he gesticulates so violently that he would upset the furniture, and that, although he was so generous with his oratory, he has only bought her "two cheap dresses" since they were married, in 1912.

Headache and Nervousness Cured. "Chamberlain's Tablets are entitled to all the praise I can give them," writes Mrs. Richard Oip, Spencerport, N. Y. "They have cured me of headache and nervousness and restored me to my normal health." For sale by all dealers. (Advertisement.)

The women are allowed to vote in the school election for trustees on the first Saturday in August.

VICE REIGNED IN CHICAGO TUNNEL

Where Helpless Girls Were Lured To Die

OR ENDURE A LIVING DEATH

Vigilants Describe Many Tortures and Crimes Inflicted On Girls.

AWFUL CONDITIONS REVEALED

Chicago, Ill., July 25.—A hundred weird tales of the mysterious disappearance of young girls and women, and even of men, never to be heard of again, that have filtered through to reform associations in Chicago in years past, sprang suddenly to the surface to-day with the revelation of the big system of tunnels and underground passages discovered by the police beneath the Twenty-second street vice district.

Young girls escaping from the dives and making their way to rescue homes have told strange tales of dark underground dens and dungeons—places where persons disappeared mysteriously and were not seen again, or places where girls who revolted against the cruelties of the divekeepers were hidden for days at a time.

Probably a greater number of these stories surround the allegedly notorious Van Bever gang of "white slavers" than any other group of divekeepers in the district.

"We have long had knowledge of these tunnels, underground passages, basements and subbasements," said Wirt W. Hallum, Secretary of the Illinois Vigilance Association, to-day. "Two years ago, during excavation work for a new building on the site of a former dive, the hang-out of a world-notorious gang of white slavers, subterranean passages were found."

"These led to underground room dens. Some of them had wretched beds in them. Others of the rooms had large quantities of quicklime, while underneath the surface of one of the underground rooms was actually uncovered the skeleton of a human being."

"At the time the belief was expressed that the quicklime was stored in the place for the purpose of obliterating trace of bodies buried in it."

"Time after time—hundreds of times—we have been told of rumors of young and innocent girls, trapped by white slavers and taken by stealth into the vice-ridden district, being hidden in these underground dens, where they were beaten into submission and became inmates of the vice dives that they might escape the tortures inflicted on them in the underground dungeons."

"In fact, it is notorious that innocent girls have been imprisoned in the subbasements twenty and thirty feet under ground, where there was no possibility of their cries being heard outside."

Rev. Ernest Bell, who conducts the Midnight Mission at Federal avenue and East Twenty-second street, declares that scores of girls have told him of the horrors and tortures of the underground dungeons.

Girls who revolted against the wrongs heaped upon them in the dives, or who sought to escape from the clutches of the dive keepers, were imprisoned in dark underground dungeons, where they were often left for as long a two days without water or food.

One girl was locked in an underground dungeon, where she was kept for more than a week, and finally to escape the horrors of the place and get away from the rats and mice continually chasing through the dungeon and visible in the dim lantern light, the girl begged to be permitted to return to the rooms of the dive above the ground.

Arthur Burrage Farwell, of the Chicago Law and Order League, has knowledge of a girl, who, first lured into a dive, sought to escape. Discovered in this she was thrown into an underground dungeon, where a white slaver told her tales of girls being killed who tried to get away, one of the means as described to her being to smuggle the girls into distant woods, and, after saturating their clothing with kerosene oil, setting them on fire.

"The revelations of these tunnels tell nothing new to the people of Chicago," says Farwell. "Their existence has long been known. Within their depths some of the most inhuman crimes in the history of this land have been committed."

Harry D. Jackson Dead.

Mr. Harry Dupey Jackson, of near Rockport, was found dead in bed last Friday morning. The deceased had been in declining health from stomach trouble and complications for several months, but was in usual health on retiring Thursday night. His death was not discovered until his failure to respond when called. His remains were interred in the Rockport cemetery Sunday afternoon.

A LIBEL SUIT BROUGHT AGAINST COL. ROOSEVELT

Wm. Barnes Asks $50,000 Damages From the Former President.

Oyster Bay, July 25.—The obligation to appear in court and defend himself against a $50,000 libel suit begun by William Barnes, Jr., chairman of the Republican State committee, was imposed on Colonel Roosevelt here with the serving on him of papers in the case. According to the lawyer who served the papers, it rests with Roosevelt as to whether the suit will be tried before the election, or delayed for perhaps two years.

"I have nothing whatever to say in reply to Mr. Roosevelt's diatribe except that it lacks dignity, self-restraint and is without foundation," reads Mr. Barnes' statement. "When an issue of this kind is raised by a person of such prominence, one has but one of three courses:

"To submit to the aspersion, to enter into an unseemly personal controversy or to appeal to the courts in order to enable the courts to utter the libel an opportunity to produce legal evidence."

"I deny the truthfulness of every statement made by Mr. Roosevelt in his publication this morning, and have instructed by counsel to bring an action for libel without delay against him."

"The issue in the primary canvass of the Republican party is in no way related to me, and the issue between Mr. Roosevelt and me will be judicially determined."

It was reported that Mr. Barnes' statement was issued after a conference among himself and other Republican leaders. The statement was made public by Lafayette B. Gleason, secretary of the Republican State committee, at the committee headquarters.

DYNAMITE BLOWS BOYS OUT OF A 25-FOOT WELL

Marion, Ky., July 25.—Lester Holliman, 18, son of Peter Holliman, of this city, was seriously injured by a dynamite explosion to-day while blasting in a well at the home of L. E. Vick. Fred Watson, about the same age, received several severe bruises, but escaped serious injury. The two boys were down in the well, which was 25 feet deep, when the explosion occurred. Both men were blown out of the well, and young Holliman, who was standing directly over the place where the dynamite was planted, narrowly escaped death.

Dr. Clarke Dies.

The funeral of Dr. C. J. Clarke, prominent druggist, Confederate veteran and Mason, who died of a general breakdown Wednesday at his home at Paris, Ky., was conducted at Paris Thursday afternoon. He was sixty-nine years of age, a native of Louisville and a son of the late Charles J. and Logan Clarke. He spent a large part of his life in Louisville, moving to Paris thirty years ago. During the Civil War he served in the famous Orphan Brigade. He was a Knight Templar.

One block's length of street on the East Side in New York will be closed to traffic for three hours each afternoon to serve as a playground.

MUCH ANXIETY NOW DISPLAYED

Over Affairs in Haiti and Santo Domingo.

DRASTIC ACTION IS IMMINENT

By United States Government
—Wilson Is Trying To End Revolts.

MATTER IS GETTING SERIOUS

Washington, July 25.—Drastic action by the United States Government in Haiti and Santo Domingo is imminent, but no steps of force will be taken until every effort is made to settle by peaceful means the revolutions in the two countries.

President Wilson explained to inquirers the position of the American Government toward the two republics as one of much anxiety. He said marines had been concentrated in the vicinity of the island so as to be ready for any emergency that might arise with respect to the lives and property of Americans and foreigners generally, and admitted that the representatives of the United States had used strong language in urging the rebellious elements to stop fighting.

The President indicated that the situation had progressed to a serious point, but that no fixed policy of intervention had as yet been determined upon, and future steps would depend on the developments from day to day.

He spoke of the difficulties which representatives of the American Government had experienced in reaching the leaders of the various factions, and intimated that no answer which could be considered final had been received as yet from the military chiefs.

Captain Eberle, of the cruiser Washington, in a dispatch to the Navy Department reported that the lighthouse at Puerta Plata had been damaged by rifle firing between the revolutionary factions.

With five full regiments of marines now afloat on expeditionary work, in addition to the many men of the same service scattered throughout the Philippines and Guam and elsewhere, the marine corps is having difficulty in meeting the demands made upon it for a full-fledged army to carry out the policies of the Administration in regard to Haiti and Santo Domingo.

HAZELWOOD IS CLOSED —LACK OF EQUIPMENT

The Louisville Times says: Principally lack of adequate equipment for its new hospital building is said to be responsible for a decision to close Hazelwood Sanitarium on August 1 for the remainder of the summer, at least, and perhaps longer. As a hospital for the treatment of tuberculosis, Hazelwood has received State aid for four years past. The last General Assembly, however, failed to appropriate for it. During the past two years it has had two serious fires. With inadequate equipment the board of trustees has declared that it would not be fair to the anti-tuberculosis movement to attempt to continue operations.

FIVE ROUNDED UP BY MUHLENBERG SHERIFF

Alleged "Possum Hunters" Taken To Greenville—Were Badly Wounded.

Greenville, Ky., July 26.—Sheriff Robt. Wickliffe rounded up and arrested three of the men to-day charged with "shooting up" the store of the Bevier Coal Company last Saturday night. Two others were not able to be brought to Greenville, and arrangements were made to bring them when they sufficiently recovered. All were suffering from gunshot wounds. Warrants were taken for all, charging them with banditism and confederating for the purpose of intimidation. Their names are Will Vance, shot in back and elbow with buckshot; George Wilkes, shot with buckshot; Joe Piper, shot in the arm and back with buckshot; Will Kimbley, shot in leg with buckshot; Emmet Cessna, shot in leg with buckshot. The first two were unable to be brought to Greenville on account of their wounds and the others made bond. Wilkes, Vance and Kimbley live in Cleaton, Piper in Bevier and Cessna in Powderly. This is the latest known outrage charged to alleged "possum hunters." These men are alleged to have been shot by J. P. Cox, general manager of the Bevier Coal Company, while an attack was being made on his store building for the purpose of inducing him to come out of the building. They will claim, it is said, that they were merely passing by when the shooting occurred. The shooting occurred shortly after midnight. Their examining trials have been set for Wednesday, August 4.

POPULATION INCREASED IN RATHER STRANGE WAY

Hartford's population increased temporarily Sunday evening to the extent of 23 people and one dog. They were aboard a house boat which had been attached by Sheriff S. O. Keown at Point Pleasant last week and placed in the care of Henry Igleheart.

We are informed that the Rigdon Bros., who owned the boat, cut loose in the absence of Mr. Igleheart and when he located them through the assistance of the Sheriff of McLean county, the boat with its 23 occupants was found at Ashbysburg. As soon as located, Sheriff Keown and Deputy Sheriff Bratcher left for Ashbysburg and brought the boat and its occupants to Hartford, arriving at the wharf Sunday night.

The style of the suit in which the attachment was issued is T. Wade Stratton vs. Rigdon Bros., and we are informed was for provisions and other merchandise furnished to the Rigdon Bros. while at Cromwell.

The trial of this suit is set for the second Monday in August in the Hartford Police Court.

VINDICATION FOR INNOCENT MAN

Who Has Spent Seven Years in a Cell.

WORST PRISONER WE'VE HAD

Say Officials Of Man Who Confessed To Other Man's Charge.

HE WANTS TO BE "PUT AWAY"

Philadelphia, July 25.—Frank Wharton Burd, an inmate of the New Jersey State Prison at Trenton, who has confessed, whether truthfully or not, to committing a murder for which another has already served seven years of a life sentence, is declared by Trenton Prison officials to be "the worst prisoner we ever had here."

The man who is said to be vicariously suffering for another's crime is John Edward Schuyler, who also is in the Trenton Prison. The victim was Manning Riley, and the scene of the crime was Calicon, N. J., in January of 1907. Arraigned in court at Flemington, N. J., Schuyler was offered an opportunity to plead guilty of manslaughter, but declaring he was innocent, he preferred to stand trial. He was convicted and sentenced to death and a gallows had been set up for his execution, when the sentence was commuted to life imprisonment.

Warden Madden does not venture an opinion concerning the value of Burd's confession, but he says that Schuyler should be released now because of his record and conduct while a prisoner. But the Pardon Board does not meet until November and his case cannot be brought to its attention earlier.

According to the official records, Burd was born at Easton, Pa., in 1891. In 1898, at the age of 7, he was committed to the New Jersey State Reformatory at Jamesburg for six years. Good conduct won him a parole, but on April 2, 1902, he was sent to the New Jersey State Home for Boys. Several times was he paroled from there, but was as often returned, and finally was discharged on Jan. 7, 1907.

Twelve days later, according to his belated confession, he murdered Manning Riley "to get square for a beating," and then went back to Easton. Just twenty-nine days later he was convicted of burglary and larceny and sentenced to ten years in the reformatory at Huntington, Pa. There he caused so much trouble among the other inmates that he was transferred to the Eastern Penitentiary in this city on Nov. 14, 1907, and he was discharged on March 19, 1909.

The following September found him a prisoner at Flemington, N. J., but he was released, to be almost immediately re-arrested on suspicion of highway robbery. He had a loaded pistol, a blackjack, a mask and a jimmy on his person. He was convicted of carrying concealed weapons and sent to the Trenton Institution.

Burd is of a powerful physique, short, thick-set and inclined to be sullen. He cannot write his own name.

Robert Darken acted as his secretary when he wanted to communicate his confession to Sheriff David L. Holcombe at Flemington. It is thus transcribed by Darken:

"As long as they all want to put me away so badly, I will confess to one of my wrongdoings which will put me away, which is a murder I committed seven years ago. It has never been found out and I want to confess."

Sheriff Holcombe took Judge H. B. Herr, of Flemington, into his confidence and they visited Burd at his cell door.

"You got another man for life for killing Manning Riley," Burd said to them. "He is innocent. I done it. I want to confess. Manning and me had a fight in Logtown right after I got out of the reform school. It was in a log stable there and I was only a small boy. He beat me up bad and I said I would get square with him, and I did. I saw him coming out of the hotel the night he was killed and followed him up the Philhower road, looking for a rock to soak him with, but I could not see any because it was dark and there was snow on the ground. Then I took a fence paling off the fence and hit him with it. He dropped, and I soaked him again, and then got away. The next day I went down to Highbridge and caught a freight to Phillipsburg and then went over to Easton. They never found me out."

"I did not mean to kill him, but I just wanted to beat him up, and I did not know that I had crooked him. I found out about this afterward. Then I got in trouble in Easton and went away, and after I was there, and when I got out, I heard about Schuyler getting life for it, and so I could not stand it any longer and wanted to tell that I done it."

Riley was killed in the manner described by Burd. But Schuyler, who also had had a quarrel with Riley, was suspected and was arrested the day after the murder.

Sheriff Holcombe and others who believe that Schuyler is innocent have set about securing corroboration of Burd's confession.

"We have traced the movements of Burd on the night of the murder and have tallied his confession," Holcombe says. "In fact, at the time Schuyler was awaiting trial some of his relatives had heard of Burd in connection with the crime. They tried to have the trial postponed until they could locate Burd, but they failed, because public sentiment was so strong against Schuyler."

"I knew that some day the truth would come out and that I would be vindicated," Schuyler says.

METHODIST CHURCH SOLD TO SATISFY CREDITORS

Pikeville, Ky., July 25.—The First Methodist Episcopal church of Pikeville has been sold by Master Commissioner F. T. Hatcher, for $4,000, to satisfy the indebtedness of Peck-Williamson Co. The church is a magnificent structure, costing, including the site, $14,000. It was appraised at $12,000. J. D. Caudill became the purchaser. The church was begun under the administration of the Rev. J. M. Ackman, district superintendent, who procured the sale of the old building and site, and began the new structure. The money which the Rev. Mr. Ackman depended upon to pay the principal part of the cost of the structure failed to materialize, and the local church was unable to meet the indebtedness. This is the first Methodist church ever sold at public auction in the State of Kentucky.

SHOT FRIEND TO DEATH OVER HARMLESS JOKE

Pittsburg, Penn., July 25.—A harmless joke brought death to Elmer J. Lissey and sorrow to his best friend last night, all because of the joking disposition of the dead man. John Quinten, living in North Braddock, a suburb, was dozing in bed when Lissey went to the house to pay him a visit. On seeing Quinten lying with his eyes closed, Lissey procured a straw and tickled his friend's nose.

The latter jumped up and grabbed a revolver from under his pillow and shot Lissey dead. The half-sleeping man, realizing what he had done, became frantic with remorse and sorrow.

The coroner impaneled a jury today and when he heard the story of Quinten he was discharged.

VILLA'S REAL NAME IS NOT GENERALLY KNOWN

All his men call him "Pancho," the Spanish nickname of Francisco. And as such he will be known when this troubled page of Mexican history is written. But the birthright name his parents gave him in the town of Las Nieves, in the State of Durango, 37 years ago, was Doro-teo Arranzo. Everything is in a name. That sixteen hundred armed men in Northern Mexico call Villa "Pancho" means a lot. It gives you one intimation of his power, defines in a word one reason for his success. "Pancho" Villa—not Doro-teo Arranzo, nor General Villa, nor even Francisco Villa—took Torreón and Jurez, and in the eyes of the world ranged himself alongside Huerta as the other man in Mexico. —[World's Work.]

PRaises MEN FOR HEROIC VENTURES

In Desperate Search For Lost Comrade.

OHIO COUNTY BOY AT HEAD

Brigade Commander Writes Letter Of Commendation Of Work.

HARDSHIPS OF RESCUE PARTY

Official and personal praise of the heroism of the Army officers and enlisted men who risked their lives in an attempt to recover the dead body of Private W. V. Walker from the fastnesses of the Koolau mountains is given by Brig. Gen. Clarence R. Edwards, commander of the First Hawaiian Brigade, in a letter written to Col. Francis H. French, of the Second Infantry, to whose command most of the men belong. Besides his praise, General Edwards declared that it would give him pleasure to recommend certificates of merit to one and perhaps two of the enlisted men of the rescue party. The letter in full follows:

"Headquarters
First Hawaiian Brigade,
Honolulu, H. T., May 11, 1914.

"From Brig. Gen. C. R. Edwards,
U. S. A., commanding, to Colonel French, commanding officer, Second Infantry.

"Subject: Commendation of Search Party.

"The recent voluntary work of a detachment under Lieut. Cary I. Crockett, A. D. C., made up of a Platoon of Company L, Second Infantry, commanded by Lieut. Thomas J. Camp, voluntarily accompanied by Second Lieut. Harold F. Nichols, C. A. C., and alternately supported and supplied by two platoons of the First Infantry, one each from Companies K and D, under Second Lieut. Virgil D. Enyart and First Lieut. Kneeland S. Snow, respectively, is especially gratifying to the brigade commander.

"The facts follow: On April 12 two privates of the Seventy-fifth Company, C. A. C., were missing and reported lost in the Koolau range since March 29, 1914. The remains of one had been found badly decomposed, washed down by floods on the other side of the high Koolau range. Search had been abandoned by the Seventy-fifth Company, C. A. C. Lieutenant Crockett was detailed to renew the search. He determined the only way to conduct it was to pick up the trail of the two men, and the only way to ascend the crest was from the Pearl Harbor side of the mountains. The detachment from the Halawa Gulch, with four thousand feet of small rope, took six hours of hard climbing to reach the crest of the range, a virtual knife edge with sheer cliffs on either side, on which places to sleep and stand had to be scraped. The detachment remained there for five days, in the rain and continual mist that shrouded everything from view, and from this dangerous camp picked up the trail and conducted the search.

"Private Midkiff, a Kentucky gentleman, was the first to volunteer to be swung over the precipice by a rope the size of a middle finger; followed by Lieutenant Camp, who had gained a reputation as mountain climber and finder of trails over mountains. Later Lieutenant Nichols followed, and then Corporal Farmer. These men for three days prosecuted the search in a howling wind and gale, in ledges of rotten stone and vegetation, endangered by falling boulders and rocks. A slight slip when not tied with rope meant death. They were swung down in vertical, pocket after pocket, averaging about fifty feet. Lieutenant Crockett, whose brilliant record under fire, where he in two different engagements sustained several desperate blows and gunshot wounds, and who endangered his life in saving a soldier from drowning, all meriting medals of honor (he is a recipient of one), reports to me that the constant danger to life that these four men willingly and frequently took in the three days, were greater in his mind than the experiences that were his—they exhibited from nerve and heroic courage.

"These men knew that it was impossible that the unaccounted for man could be alive, and therefore we have the fine picture of two young officers putting their lives in jeopardy several times to rescue the remains of a dead private; the kind of work that emphasizes the interest taken by the officer for the soldier and that I find is characteristic of the relations between officer and soldier.

"I desire to congratulate you as regimental commander on the participation of your regiment in this fine and well-conducted work. And so as to express my official and personal admiration to each of the three men of your regiment—Lieutenant Camp, Corporal Farmer and Private Midkiff—I desire that you furnish an official copy of this letter to each.

"I believe, under par. 184 and 185, A. R., a certificate of merit is certainly due Private Midkiff, and probably Corporal Farmer, and it will give me pleasure to favorably recommend any such action that your independent inquiry may warrant you to make."

Editorial Note.—The Private Midkiff mentioned above and who played such a heroic part in voluntary work in behalf of a stricken comrade, is Mr. Charles Midkiff, son of Mrs. Lucretia Midkiff, of Dundee, this county.

THE INCREASE OF LAWS IS A GROWING MENACE

When we came to the bar twenty-seven years ago the jurisprudence of Kentucky was contained in eighty-five volumes, the last three of which had not then been published. Today the official Kentucky Reports have reached 150 volumes. In addition to this there are thirty-three volumes of the Kentucky Law Reporter, 159 volumes of the Southwestern and about fourteen volumes of Kentucky Opinions, all of which books have been digested and cited in the Digests containing over ten large volumes. In addition to this, the Kentucky Court of Appeals cites the American Reports, the L. R. A. and numerous other sets of books. To undertake to examine a given proposition of law and to read all that the court has cited upon the point, and to read the great number of ancillary cases cited, gives a lawyer the nervous jimmies, takes up all his time reading worthless opinions and in the end he may find that he has overlooked some case which the presiding Judge of the court may think is the best opinion of them all. Thus he finds himself humiliated and out of court, although he has made the best effort of his life in the presentation of his case for his client. If the people will amend their Constitution and do away with biennial sessions of the Legislature, the enormous burden now placed upon the courts of the State and the stupendous amount of cost thus entailed on litigants, they will perform a great service for the State and themselves.—[Richmond Madisonian.]

EVIL OF ALCOHOL URGED UPON MEN

In Order Issued By The Czar Of Russia.

BRYAN COMMENTS ON MATTER

And Points Out Deadening Effect Of Alcohol Used Any Way.

MAKES A STRONG COMPARISON

A press dispatch from Russia brings the interesting news that the czar has issued an order driving intoxicating liquor out of the Russian army. The following is the text of the dispatch:

"Emperor Nicholas has just promulgated a general order dealing with the drink evil in his army. Its provisions are of the most drastic character, and as such will doubtless commend themselves to Secretary Josephus Daniels of the United States navy. Vodka is forbidden to the men at all times, and the czar directs that the most stringent measures shall be taken to prevent them from buying it. No soldier, if he is known to be inclined to drink, is to be allowed to receive money from home, without special permission from his commanding officer.

"Officers of every rank are forbidden to drink spirits in camp, on maneuvers, or while on any kind of duty, and those in high command are ordered by the emperor to discourage as much as possible the drinking of alcohol, and to set an example in the matter of total abstinence to their subordinates. All cases of drunkenness, either among officers or men, are to be dealt with in the most severe manner possible. Medical officers of the army are to deliver periodical lectures to officers and men on the harmful effects of alcohol.

"Commanders of regiments are instructed to do their best to improve the mess life of the officers under their orders, and to foster the introduction of games, the addition of libraries to the mess quarters, and to arrange for facilities for the study of foreign languages. In the same way, the company officers are required to endeavor to improve the lot of the rank and file by devising and organizing games and sports, which will keep them out of doors, wholesomely occupied during their free time. Soldiers known to be addicted to drink are to be the subject of special solicitude by the regimental officers, chaplains and surgeons.

"This is the first occasion on which any such general order has ever been issued to the Russian troops. But the emperor has been led to issue it by the necessity of adding to the efficiency of his huge army. Field Marshal Lord Kitchen demonstrated in his various Sudan campaigns, culminating in the crushing of the Dervish Mahdi at Omdurman in 1898, the military advantages of total abstinence from alcohol when on active service, and since then there has been a disposition on the part of the military authorities in all countries to discourage the use of alcohol among officers and men, modern methods of warfare and arms of precision demanding an extremely level head and steady hand, rather than reckless gallantry, prompted by what is popularly known as 'Dutch courage.'

What have the defenders of booze to say in answer to this very conclusive evidence of the evil of alcoholic drinks?

If the soldier must give up alcohol because it interferes with his efficiency, why should not the civilian promote his efficiency by giving it up? And if it is demonstrated that alcohol is an evil, and only an evil; if it is proven that it lessens the productive value of the citizen, who will say that the nation should look upon this great evil with indifference merely because a few people want to grow rich out of a drink that is destructive? Why should we condemn opium, morphine and cocaine if we are to worship at the shrine of whiskey and beer?

Secretary Daniels need not fear that his policy of excluding intoxicants from the navy will be condemned by the American people. In putting a ban upon alcoholic drinks in the navy he is showing the same wisdom that characterizes Emperor William and the czar in the efforts they are making in behalf of total abstinence.

W. J. BRYAN.

The Most Beautiful City.

To ask for the name of the "most beautiful city in the world" is to ask a very large and difficult question. There are a great many very beautiful cities in the world, each of which would get its votes were the contest to arise. Lovely places are to be found by the score in every country of the East, but if put to the vote of travelers it is probable that Palermo, Sicily, would win out. It may be that there is a more beautiful city in the world than the Sicilian town, but it would be exceedingly difficult to name it.

WAS LOST IN CORNFIELD FOR TWENTY-FOUR HOURS

Tulsa, Okla., July 25.—Lost in a 500-acre cornfield for twenty hours, with the temperature at 100 degrees, was the experience of Mike Lingo, a Tulsa county farmer, who is ill at his home near Broken Arrow.

Lingo was cutting alfalfa in a field adjoining the corn when he saw a black timber wolf enter the corn. He went to his home, got his shotgun and entered the corn.

The field is in a fertile river bottom of Tulsa county, the stalks being from 12 to 15 feet high, making the field resemble a dense forest.

Lingo tramped through the forest of corn until sundown without finding a trace of the animal. When he decided to return home he discovered that he was lost. For hours he wandered up and down the corn rows. He shouted for help without avail.

Eventually, exhausted and almost overcome by heat, he gave up the idea of finding his way out of the field in the dark and decided to make a night of it there.

Meanwhile, his wife, becoming alarmed over the absence of her husband, organized a searching party of neighbors. Late the following morning they heard cries and found Lingo, who by this time was ill from his experience.

Lingo told his rescuers he was glad Tulsa county had cornfields of such promise as to cause a man to lose his way, but he would not repeat his experience for all the corn the field will produce.

RECENT HISTORY, MEXICAN SCRAP

Including Incidents Of Much Importance.

A SKETCH OF HUERTA'S REIGN

And Happenings Connected
Therewith Up To The Present Time.

RESUME OF THE SITUATION

Victoriano Huerta took oath as Provisional President of Mexico February 19, 1913, the day after Francisco I. Madero had been arrested at the national palace. Three days later Madero and Jose Maria Pino Suarez, Vice President, were shot to death on a midnight ride, under guard, from the palace to the penitentiary. The manner of their death has never been satisfactorily explained.

One of Huerta's first acts as Provisional President was to telegraph William H. Taft, then President of the United States, the following message:

"I have the honor to inform you that I have overthrown this government. The forces are with me and from now on peace and prosperity will reign."

The republic was at once plunged into civil war again, notwithstanding the issuance by Huerta of a proclamation of general amnesty. The Sonora State Congress officially repudiated the Provisional Government before Huerta had settled himself comfortably in the presidential chair. Zapata, revolutionary leader to the south of the capital, after negotiating a few days with the new regime, went back to his guerrilla campaign. Salazar, one of the highest generals in the army, denounced Huerta. Carranza, Constitutionalist leader in Chihuahua, assailed him in a bitter statement made public at San Antonio. Francisco Villa announced himself an adherent of Madero and joined the ranks of the Northern army. Pascual Orozco, of the clan of the Northern revolutionaries, was the lone notable figure among the disaffected who declared for the new government.

President Taft, nearing the end of his term, left to his successor the problem of adjusting diplomatic relations with Mexico. To Woodrow Wilson Huerta sent felicitations on the day of the American President's inauguration.

Hampered at the outset of his administration by the refusal of the United States to recognize him, Huerta soon faced growing difficulties in raising funds to run his government. His uneasy hold upon affairs was weakened by minor Constitutionalist victories in the North, and by recurring rumors of a break with Felix Diaz, nephew of Porfirio Diaz, and Huerta's ally in the overthrow of Madero.

On May 1 Huerta announced that he would urge Congress to call elections in October to choose his successor. The Congress selected October 26 as the date of the election, and a decree to that effect was issued by Huerta on June 3.

Felix Diaz, who had announced himself as a candidate for the presidency, was sent to Japan on July 17. Henry Lane Wilson, the American Ambassador, was recalled to Washington and Nelson O'Shaughnessy, Charge d'Affaires, was left in charge of American interests in Mexico.

Early in August it became known that President Wilson intended to send John Lind, former Governor of Minnesota, to Mexico as his personal representative in an endeavor to arrange a basis for the republic's peace. Huerta announced that he would not tolerate interference.

Nevertheless Mr. Lind delivered his note from President Wilson. Huerta rejected all proposals made by the American Government, chief of which were the suggestions that he resign and that he not be a candidate on election day. Relations between Mexico and the United States became acute. President Wilson proclaimed his policy in an address before Congress to which was attached the correspondence between Mr. Lind and the Huerta administration.

Huerta was attacked in the Senate on October 5 by Senator Dominguez and some of his colleagues. Dominguez disappeared. The Chamber of Deputies adopted a resolution calling for an investigation.

To this Huerta's reply was dramatic and swift. He marched a column of troops to the chambers of the Deputies and seized 110 of them and threw them into prison. Next he dissolved the Congress and took unto himself the legislative authority, calling for an election of new members October 26. Through Mr. O'Shaughnessy, the United States made representations against violence to the imprisoned Deputies. In the election campaign certain influences close to the dictator worked for his return to the presidency with Gen. Blanquet as his running mate, and lent color to the report that Huerta really desired to be elected and that his pretenses to the contrary were a sham.

When it became certain that the elections had resulted in no constitutional choice on account of failure of voters to go to the polls, the American Government peremptorily called on him to resign. In a statement to the diplomatic corps November 9 he announced that he would declare the result of the election null and order another election.

November 12 Huerta refused to accede to the American demand for his resignation, and John Lind left Mexico City for Vera Cruz.

Meantime the United States dispatched warships to the Mexican coast and Americans continued to leave Mexico.

Definite proposals were made by the United States to Carranza and his adherents. Several of the European Powers, notably Great Britain, Germany and France, gave strong support to the policy of the United States. The Constitutionalist grew stronger and continued their advance to the south. They captured Victoria, Chihuahua, Juarez and Tullacian.

The situation became so critical that Great Britain, Germany, France, Spain and Japan ordered warships to Mexican waters.

Fighting continued at Tampico and many other centers and Torreon was taken by the Constitutionalist.

An embargo placed on the exportation of arms from the United States to Mexico was raised early in February of the present year.

A large number of American troops were concentrated on the border and the American fleet in Mexican waters was strengthened.

The Constitutionalist advanced on Torreon and Monterey, and the former place was captured early in April.

Then came the departure of John Lind from Vera Cruz and the arrest of a party of American bluejackets at Tampico, for which an apology and salute were demanded by the United States and refused by Huerta.

On April 12 bluejackets and marines were landed and occupied Vera Cruz in consequence of the reported arrival of a large consignment of arms and ammunition for Huerta. A number of Americans were killed in the street fighting. The Mexicans retired and destroyed a portion of the railway.

Shortly afterward a mediation proposal received from Argentina, Brazil and Chile was accepted and a consultation ensued at Niagara Falls.

In the interval American troops relieved the bluejackets at Vera Cruz and have since remained in occupation of the port.

Tampico and Zacatecas fell into the hands of the Constitutionalist, and the victorious armies continued their march on Mexico City, where rumors had been in circulation for many weeks of the approaching resignation of Huerta.

Huerta's abdication has now occurred and the public awaits future developments in war-stricken Mexico.

THE RENAISSANCE OF MARSE HENRY WATTERSON

Years ago a voice came out of Louisville that was one of the most potent in the land. It was powerful, wonderfully seductive, even when most illogical and always eminently individual.

Then came a period of eclipse. The party of Watterson was no longer the same as in the days of old. The times were out of joint, and though he may have been born to set them right, his mission was not clearly recognized. How could it be wondered at, when riders without ruffles were in the saddle, that so be-plumed a knight as he of Louisville would fain retire from leadership of so distasteful an army?

But his sun had not set, and its rays are again in full effulgence. Once more doth the nation recognize the trumpet call from the Courier-Journal sanctum. "Marse Henry" is again the "Marse Henry" of other days. He is again a prophet—once more in glory. And over all the length and breadth of the land runs the wish that, wayward as he may be at times, his "comeback" may last throughout his life and his life throughout at least our generation.

MOTHER'S SECRET WAS LAID BARE

To Save Wayward Son
From Gallows,

BUT HE SUICIDED IN CELL

Mother Declares That Prenatal Influences Made Her Son
a Criminal.

WAS "UP AGAINST HARD GAME"

Boston, Mass., July 24.—Lawrence ("Chippy") Robinson, of Washington, C. H., Ohio, desperado, who shot and killed Police Inspector Thomas J. Norton in a cafe here a month ago, ended his life early today in his cell at Charles Street Jail by cutting his throat and an artery in his left wrist with a small steel shank which he removed from one of his shoes. His trial for murder began Monday.

Robinson was game to the end. He calmly lay back on his cot after cutting his throat and wrist and bled to death without making an outcry. He died within 40 minutes after inflicting the wounds.

Robinson planned to kill himself several days ago.

Where he got the strip of steel was at first a mystery. But investigation disclosed that he had sharpened a tablespoon and used this to cut the inner sole of his patent leather shoes and extract the shank from one of them. Then he sharpened the piece of steel for its use against himself. He had once been a shoemaker and was familiar with the construction of shoes.

Robinson's death came two hours before he was to appear in Court for the fifth day of his trial.

Only last week Governor Hatfield, of West Virginia, issued a requisition upon the Massachusetts authorities for him and a confederate named Joseph Duddy for despoiling a Hamilton jeweler of $14,000 worth of diamonds last March.

Trapped in a Boston restaurant by a squad of police, headed by Inspector Norton, he drew the revolver that his nature taught him to carry and actually loved and tried to fight his way to freedom. The inspector was killed and Robinson, crippled by three bullets, was captured, struggling like a wounded wildcat.

Known to the officers of the law as a dangerous wild man, careless of his own life and reckless of the lives of others, he was hunted as men hunt big game, double armed and with caution. Yet he was able to break through the circle of blazing pistols, spurring their lead at him and almost got safely away. It was but one of many experiences where he gambled with death and always won.

"Up Against Hard Game."

Letters found in Robinson's effects, and dated July 18, indicate that he contemplated suicide before his trial had begun. In one note he said:

"To my dear mother and to my wife, Dora Alice:

"The loving sweetheart of my boyhood days, the only woman I have ever loved and who stuck to me through all the shame into which I plunged her, I bid a last fond good-bye, and if there is a God Almighty and another world, I pray that I may meet you."

To Sheriff John Quinn, his keeper, and to his counsel, John H. and Hugh C. Blanchard, he wrote:

"You're up against a hard game when you've got to die to beat it. I wouldn't wait to go to the chair for the satisfaction it would give certain people. I hate this on account of the sheriff, who, through strict, is a man, and my attorneys, Mr. John H. Blanchard and Mr. Hugh Blanchard, who have gone to an immense amount of trouble and expense to prepare my defense."

His Mother's Secret.

The mother of Lawrence Robinson was ready to bare her secret to the world in an effort to save her son from the gallows. She blamed his criminal tendencies on prenatal influences, because she had been seduced.

In a signed statement at her home in Washington, C. H., Ohio, a few days ago, Mrs. Robinson said:

"Realizing that it may have the effect of mitigating the rigor of the law in its action against my boy, I am willing that it should be known that he is subject to forces he cannot control. Before he was born I harbored a hatred toward his father that amounted to thoughts of murder. I showed this by getting a pistol, keeping it loaded, and having it always near me. I feel sure I would have used it if I had been given the opportunity.

"Five months before my boy was born I knew I had been deceived. At times I was on the verge of insanity. I hoped and told others that I wished I might die. I shrank from all friends and acquaintances, and the boy all his life has shown the same disposition. I feel sure the disposition was impressed upon him before birth. In his boyhood he had spells of melancholia, when he would wander alone through the country, avoiding associates. He used to tell me he could not help it.

"I am sure he got from me a disposition to kill that he may not be able to control. It was not until a few years ago that I eradicated this feeling from my heart, although the boy's father has been dead for many years. I am his mother."

Wonder what the City Council is going to do about the wretched condition of the pavements of Hartford? Fall and winter will soon be here.

The Mann White Slave law is all right, but it is a poor rule that cannot be made to work both ways when necessary. Guilt is personal and is sometimes of plural number.

The initials G. O. P. always need the addition of a C. to make them really mean anything. For, used in a political party connection, they always mean Grand Old Pie Counter.

The Attorney General of Kansas has decided that lady voters are not required to tell their age. All they need say is that they are old enough to vote. Some diplomacy about a decision like that.

Every Democrat in Ohio county should go to the primary election next Saturday and express his choice of candidates for the various offices to be filled next November. Don't neglect to go to the primary and then be dissatisfied with the selection.

Ben Johnson's Record.

No representative in Congress has watched more carefully the people's interest than has Ben Johnson, and notwithstanding the fact that he could have made thousands in Washington City by standing with the rich and the grafters against the people, he has always championed the people's interest, which is your interest. See that you are as careful as to his interest on August the first. —[Kentucky Standard.]

KENTUCKIAN TRAILS STOLEN NAG 500 MILES

St. Louis, Mo., July 25.—After driving more than 500 miles in a buggy and spending more than $200 in the search, M. E. Poole, of Robards, Ky., has recovered a horse valued at $125, which was stolen from his home. He found it on Joseph Leonard's farm near Belleville, Ill. Poole told Leonard that his mother, who is ill, was so fond of the horse that its loss made her condition worse, and therefore he had spared no expense in recovering it.

A man charged with stealing the horse is under arrest at Dixon, Ky. The horse was sold to Henry Stackler, of East St. Louis, Ill., who in turn sold it to Leonard.

OLATON.

July 27.—We had a fine rain last night, which was badly needed.

Mrs. Rilla Daniel's barn was burned last Sunday night. She also lost the farming tools, 90 bales of hay and four or five wagon loads of oats. It is thought to have been the work of an incendiary. No clue.

Mr. J. W. Moseley and A. P. Yeiser, two old Confederate soldiers of near Whitesville; Mr. Virgil Renfrow and Mr. William Dean and son Master Fred Dean, of Dundee, were the guests of Mr. Jake Westerfield and family last Friday. The host having served in the Confederate army, they spent a most pleasant day talking over the old times they had during the war.

Mrs. Graves, of Olaton, visited her daughter, Mrs. Holderman, Philpot, Daviess county, recently.

Mrs. Pate returned to her home at Owensboro last Wednesday, after several days visit to relatives in Olaton.

Dollie Johnson and daughter Ernestine, of —, visited E. M. Hoover and J. B. Canan's families last Friday.

Mr. Carson Duncan, wife and son, of Narrows, visited Mrs. Duncan's parents here Sunday.

GEN. BENNETT H. YOUNG ASKS SOME QUESTIONS

Gen. Bennett H. Young, speaking at Madisonville in behalf of his candidacy for the short term, said: "It has been persistently and continuously charged, and never denied, that Hon. Johnson N. Camden, now candidate for the United States Senate for the short term, refused to vote for William Jennings Bryan in 1896, 1900 and 1908, when Mr. Bryan was the Democratic standard-bearer for the Presidency. Twenty days ago I publicly stated this and advised Mr. Camden that if he would deny the charge I would take fullest opportunity in every speech I made to right him in this regard. Nothing has come from him on the subject.

"If Mr. Camden could not afford to vote for Mr. Bryan when three times nominated by his party for the Presidency, can the Democrats of Kentucky afford now to vote for Mr. Camden for the United States Senate?

"It may be true that Mr. Camden in 1911 and 1912 paid to the campaign funds the fabulous sum of $45,000, but can he, when refusing to support the party leaders, win the votes of Democrats by contributions to campaign expenses, even though these be large enough to stagger belief?

"As to what party Mr. Camden belonged before 1911 there is no record. He made no speeches, he helped in no canvasses. As far as the public knows he did nothing in advocacy of Democratic principles until 1911. Will two barbecues, where crowds can be fed at twenty-five cents apiece, and big campaign money make a Democrat suitable for United States Senator?" (Advertisement.)

BARRETT'S FERRY.

July 27.—It is conceded by all that the Ohio County Teachers' Institute held at Hartford last week was the best for many years. Prof. Coates, the instructor, has devoted his entire time for many years to the study of the rural school and its relation to rural life. Unlike most instructors, he presents the result of his work in such simple terms that even the most unlearned can understand.

New Bayums school has always felt proud of her record, for she has furnished perhaps more successful teachers, farmers, doctors, lawyers, ministers and business men than any other rural school in the county, but this year she has taken on a still prouder air, for of those attending school there within the past year, seven were granted common school diplomas and three were granted teachers' certificates.

Quite a pleasant social was given last Monday evening by Misses Amanda and Stella Harl in honor of their guests, Misses Daisy and Mae Chapman and Martine Harl, of Owensboro. The evening was highly enjoyed by all present.

Mrs. Ada Park-Young, of this place, will leave for Atlanta, Ga., August 8.

Mr. Barney Hocker and sister Miss Sadie spent Sunday in the Walton's Creek neighborhood, the guests of their uncle, Mr. Jake Rhoads, who is sick.

Wilma Lucile, little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Goff, of this place, is sick.

William Carlus, little son of Mr. and Mrs. Chester Stewart, is convalescent.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Stevens spent Sunday at Mr. Will Stevens', Goshen.

Little Miss Emma Ward, of near Centertown, is visiting her aunt, Mrs. Arthur Faught.

Mr. Lewis Brown and family, of this place, visited in West Providence neighborhood Saturday night and Sunday.

Mrs. H. M. Tichenor and son Tracy, of near Centertown, visited Mrs. Tichenor's sister, Mrs. J. M. Shoulders, Saturday night and Sunday.

Card of Thanks.

I wish by this means to sincerely thank our friends and neighbors who were so kind in their attentions and ministrations to my wife during her recent fatal illness and the scenes surrounding it. May God reward you according to His gracious promises, is my prayer, inspired by my sincere appreciation.

Very gratefully,

C. C. SMOTHERS,

Wheat Preparation

Must begin as soon as the ground will do to plow. In fact, with the famous OLIVER RIDING-BREAKING PLOW you can begin at any time.

So the first consideration is to buy one of our OLIVER PLOWS and the rest will be easy. If you haven't had a demonstration of its work call us up and our man will show you in your own field.

The progress our farmers have made in the production of wheat is certainly very encouraging.

Only a few years ago a yield of 2 or 3 hundred bushels on our farms was a big crop. Now we have many farmers whose record is over one thousand bushels a year—and yet we are not producing as much as we are consuming. Boys, let's feed ourselves next year. Let's go in for more acres and more bushels to the acre; use better plows and plow more acres in a day.

Buy an OLIVER. This great company has progressed in producing plows as you have progressed in your methods of farming. Keep pace with each other and both will come out triumphant in the end.

BASE BALL.

On Saturday afternoon at East End Park the best game of the season to date was staged between Hartford and Hardinsburg. This was the deciding contest of a series of three and consequently the interest of the local fans was at fever heat. The Breckenridge county boys well upheld their reputation for skill and sportsmanship. Rickard and Blankenship did slab duty for the Magnates, while Brown and Ditt occupied the limelight for the visitors. Rickard got off to a slow start, but as soon as he got to going good he had the edge on his opponents all the rest of the way. Vig Morton umpired his usual good game. The game was very fast throughout and was a seesaw affair up to the crucial frame. Defeat for the locals was staved off in the ninth only by Rickard's classy triple and singles by Cundiff and Johnson. Then after the well-matched teams had battled through two extra rounds of big league ball, our old reliable twirler and all-around "gentleman of the diamond" won his own game when he was safe at first on a pretty bingle to center and scored as a result of Plummer's hit between left and center and Cundiff's successful bunt down the third base line.

	Score.
Innings	1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10 11—RHE
Hartford	0 0 3 1 0 0 0 0 2 0 1—7 11 5
Hardinsburg	2 0 0 0 0 3 0 0 1 0 0—6 6 7

What was expected to be one of the best games of the season proved almost a farce when the Oil Magnates stacked up against a certain aggregation from Owensboro on the local ball lot on Wednesday afternoon. The visitors sure got something they didn't expect and were entirely outclassed by Manager "Hague's" classy troupe of diamond stars. The presence of the county teachers and an unusual number of the local ladies helped to swell the large crowd present and made it a good day for the box office. The final score was 17 to 2 in favor of Hartford.

On Tuesday afternoon of last week, as one of the side attractions of the Teachers' Institute, a weird seance in the ball line was staged on the local diamond between the Hartford second team and a team selected from among the visiting teachers. There were flashes of classy playing on both sides interspersed with several original dashes. The pedagogues were victorious to the tune of 9 to 7.

On Thursday afternoon another one-sided contest was pulled off at East End Park between the local seconds and Renfrow, the former winning by the score of 18 to 4.

The "Juvenile League" also got busy during the week and staged a contest on Friday afternoon between the local third and fourth teams, in which the latter, "the smallest ball team in captivity," was victorious by the close margin of one run. Final score 11 to 10.

The Hardinsburg boys went Sunday to Centertown, where they engaged in a game with the Equality team, the result being 4 to 5 in favor of the latter. It was a very interesting game and some good playing was seen. There was quite a large crowd in attendance, several ladies being present. Much of the pleasure of the game was spoiled, however, by the wild, riotous and rough actions of the rooters for the home team. The path from third base to the home plate and from the latter to first base was lined up by howling rooters who would tantalize the players in every conceivable way. At one time the umpire (Mr. Vig Morton, as fair a man as ever decided a game) was compelled to leave the field on account of the ill treatment accorded him by players or their friends. Afterwards, however, he was persuaded to return. Centertown games are getting to be noted for the prevalence of hoodlums and riotous conduct, which should be stopped in the interest of peace and good order. It is all right to "root" for the home players, but there is a wide difference between the cheers of enthusiasm and the riotous conduct and tantalizing, almost insulting tactics manifested towards visiting players. An efficient peace officer on hand at each game would help some.

Mrs. Polly Doolan, of Logansport, is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Joe McKenney, this week.

Mr. Dav Taylor, of Princeton, is in town this week, laying the foundation for a new residence for Mr. Byron Barnes. When completed Mr. Barnes will have one of the most beautiful homes in the country.

Messrs. Taylor and Hocker shipped a car-load of mixed stock last week. They paid 6 1/2c for lambs and 8 1/4c for hogs. They have about cleaned up the stock and will now buy a car-load of cats. We think they will do well, as fiddle strings are in demand.

ed people are charged in an affidavit, sworn to by Marshal Burden, of Fordville, with having passed a worthless check on J. E. Jolley, a saloonkeeper of Owensboro. It is charged that they obtained $42 on a check of Joe Early on the Bank of Dundee, which it is stated was drawn by Clarence Smith, and that the two arrested people knew it was not the check of Early. The woman claimed not to have gotten any of the money except what the man and an alleged accomplice spent on her.

They were sent to jail to await trial, being unable to give bond.

The Messenger of Monday says: Remus Barnett was held over to the grand jury by County Judge Lancaster on Monday under $200 bond, charging him with obtaining money under false pretenses. He was unable to give bond and was returned to jail, where he had been since Saturday. Barnett was accused of obtaining $44 on a bad check from J. E. Jolley, proprietor of a saloon in Owensboro. Parthenia Rogers, arrested in connection with Barnett, was turned loose, the prosecution being unable to connect her with the trouble. The parties hail from Magan Station, in Ohio county.

DEAD LETTER OFFICE HAS BEEN ABOLISHED

Big Decrease in Lost and Misdirected Mail Responsible For Closing.

Washington, July 18.—The "dead letter" office in the postal department in Washington is no more. The last auction sale of old letters and parcels has been held; $4,500 was realized; 80 employees were discharged or transferred to other departments and Uncle Sam is conducting his "letter business" more efficiently.

The office was really abolished because of the big decrease in lost, misdirected or unsigned pieces of mail, and because letters addressed to persons who cannot be found are more speedily disposed of by opening machines and quick clerks.

But while the "dead letter" office is to be abolished here, the misdirected mail matter in the future is to be distributed to 15 cities throughout the country. For instance, if a letter is mailed from Springfield, Ohio, to Albany, N. Y., and the address is correct and there is no return address on the envelope, the letter will be sent to Chicago, where it will be opened. If information as to the name of the sender is written therein the letter will be forwarded back to Springfield.

To Benjamin Franklin probably belongs the distinction of starting the dead letter division of the post-office. When the seat of the Federal Government was in Philadelphia, Franklin had a bureau where misdirected letters were examined. The dead letter office was established here in 1825. Before 1860 few detailed records were kept of the receipts in the dead letter office, although one old book in the department showed that in 1830 there were 380,000 letters referred to that bureau. In 1859 in response to a Senate resolution the Postmaster General reported that the receipts of parcels and letters for the year numbered 2,500,000.

In 1875 there were 29 men and 50 women employed in this bureau and the office was mentioned as a "model of industry and punctuality."

Last year the force consisted of about 180 persons and more than 12,000,000 pieces of mail matter were handled, most of it being returned to senders.

REPUBLICANS DESIRE BECKHAM NOMINATED

The Cincinnati Enquirer's Kentucky political department last Sunday published the following statement, which is a well known fact:

"The Republican wisecracks all say that Colonel Richard P. Ernst, of Covington, is one copper-riveted cinch for the long term Senatorial nomination of his party, and every mother's son of them is praying that Beckham will be the man pitted against him from the Democratic side. The Republicans believe that if Beckham is nominated thousands of Democrats will refuse to support him in November, and that the vast majority of these will give their suffrage to Ernst, as they gave it to Willson against Hager for Governor in 1907."

What good Democrat wants to play into the hands of the Republicans, especially when the great office of United States Senator is at stake? —[Big Sandy News.]

The August American Magazine.

In the August American Magazine "Jerry" Travers, present amateur golf champion of the United States, writes an article full of thrilling stories and good advice entitled "Wonder Shots that Won Golf Championships." It is just as interesting to readers who never played golf as to those who do play the game.

Ray Stannard Baker tells "How Uncle Sam Spends Your Income Tax Dollar." He went to Washington, made an investigation, and reports penny for penny what becomes of a dollar when Uncle Sam gets it—63 cents for this, 17 cents for that, etc. His article is full of news and genuine surprises.

Will Irwin tells a wonderful true dog story; Walter Prichard Eaton tells a love story; Stephen Leacock writes of "Arcadian Adventures with the Idle Rich"; Number 6606.

a convict in a western penitentiary, writes another Boston Blackie story entitled "The Story of Dad Morgan"; Alice Hegan Rice, famous as the author of "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch," writes a story of a Kentucky mountaineer called "Pop"; Marjorie Benton Cooke goes on with "Bamby"; a husband with twenty-five years' experience in matrimony writes of the discoveries and experiences of middle age; and the interesting People department contains intimate accounts of five remarkable characters.

The prize-winning letters in the contest entitled "The Best Story I Ever Heard" complete the number.

A TRAGEDY OF LIFE.

(Chicago Herald.)

EARL MCGILL, successful physician, "leading citizen" of country town, "influential," married, several children.

MARY MCGILL, wife of Earl; knows his faults; disillusioned, but faithful.

DANIEL FUNK, contractor; business keeps him moving about; no real home.

FLORENCE FUNK, wife of Daniel; "well provided for"; no children.

Dr. McGill called to a new patient. Finds the illness slight and the patient charming. Also "rather lonely." Calls again—and again—and again.

Daniel Funk hears gossip. Investigates; learns the truth; secures positive evidence. Applies for divorce; plain case; divorce granted. Dr. McGill asks his wife to "give him his freedom." She is willing; he no longer loves her. Signs petition for divorce. "But there are the children!" Told petition has been withdrawn.

Messenger arrives with telegram. Oldest son of the McGills, who has gone to the big city to start in life, injured in automobile accident. Mother hastens to him.

Earl McGill reads his wife's withdrawn divorce petition. Confesses truth of charges. Willing to "provide" for wife. Their homestead and $100 a month. Case "legally" complete. Judge, anxious to "oblige," enters decree.

Earl McGill goes to another State and secretly marries Florence Funk. Daniel Funk, still loving his former wife, learns this and falls into a mad rage. Seeks out McGill and shoots him down.

Mary McGill hastens back from the bedside of their son to that of the man whom she believes is her husband. He confesses that he has no claim upon her care. They are divorced. He is no longer her husband. He has another wife!

No; this is not the scenario of a moving picture play. It has not been "imagined." No novelist or playwright took scattering fragments of the tangle and tragedy—of the folly and sin and suffering—of life and pieced them together to round it out.

In this particular case it happened to happen in Colorado. It has happened—just the same tragedy of human folly and sin, with suffering of the guilty, and of the innocent for the guilty—in Illinois, in Chicago, perhaps in your own block. It happens, too often, everywhere. It happens wherever men and women forget DUTY under the pressure of passion; forget HONOR that they may have what they regard, for a moment, as PLEASURE.

The moral? Only the old, old one, spoken with Divine authority from the Judean hills so many centuries ago. Only the old, but everlasting, never-changing, eternally true one: THE WAGES OF SIN IS DEATH!

Best Diarrhoea Remedy.

If you have ever used Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy you know that it is a success. Sam F. ## POEMS YOU'LL ENJOY.

The Herald's Special Selections

"WHEN WE WERE BOYS."

As children at play on father's farm
We were taught by parents to do no harm.

Our father and mother did church work,
No Christian duty did either shirk.

Yet with such teaching, we as boys,
Did many a thing to increase our joys.

We would yoke the calves, bridle the colt,
With cornucops give the geese a jolt.

To the swimming hole below the field,
On every Sunday we would yield.

Stand on the hillside—almost despair—
Waiting for the sun to dry our hair.

Behind the barn was our race track;
Our jockeys all rode bareback.

Our visitors' horses were often tried;
The minister's especially was made to glide.

For once a month the minister came,
Riding solemnly up our father's lane.

At table they sat with solemn face,
While the minister quietly said grace.

We boys were forced to stand and wait,
While the minister gladly filled his plate.

With the chicken or turkey we had caught,
Also potatoes and beans our hands had wrought.

Finally the minister, with deep-toned voice,
Said, "Thank you, this dinner was very choice."

Pushed back from the table amid his joys—
Seemed little to think of us hungry boys.

As the table we children surrounded,
Found our anticipations not well founded.

Nothing of chicken but the gravy and feet,
Empty plates and dishes our eyes did meet.

The potatoes were gone, so were the pies;
Scraps and crumbs greeted our eyes.

Jellies and cake had all been eaten,
For the minister's tooth had to be sweetened.

What else could we do but go to the creek
Or behind the barn to the race track sneak?

Boys must have fun, that is a fact,
Either at the table, creek or race track.

JOINT DEBATES NOW A THING OF THE PAST

Commenting on the passing of the time-honored political joint debates, Editor Ed O. Leigh says in the Bowling Green Messenger:

"The custom of holding joint debates between rival candidates for nomination for office in Kentucky has fallen into disuse in recent years. If memory is not at fault, the last series of joint debates held in Kentucky between rival candidates for the Democratic nomination for Governor took place in 1883 between J. Proctor Knott and Thomas L. Jones. These speeches frequently became vituperative, and only the big Democratic majority in the State prevented harm being done in the general election."

"Way back in the last half hundred years when Gov. McCreary was the Democratic nominee for Governor for probably the first time, he made a joint canvass of the State with Judge Harlan, the Republican nominee."

Gov. Buckner and W. O. Bradley met once in a joint discussion, but the old Sage of Glen Lily did not like that character of debate and refused to meet his opponent further.

Gen. Hardin and Senator Bradley also met in joint debate two or three times, but the bad feeling almost caused a riot, and the party authorities of both parties called a halt.

"Since that time each candidate has made his own dates. It is, therefore, not a sign of weakness, nor an acknowledgment of an inability to debate the issues, that has caused, such a practice to grow up."

PERIL OF EDUCATION.

There was a man in our town who could neither read nor write. He was foreign born and had never been in school. Yet he had a pleasing address and some natural gifts.

He heard that the position of sexton at the church was vacant and being out of a job he applied for the post. Having good recommendations and being of sober habits and industrious he was favorably received.

The trustees were about to grant him the place, when one asked him if he could read and write.

He answered no. They declined then to employ him. It would never do to have a sexton who was entirely illiterate.

He had a friend who kept a tobacco shop. To him he told of his failure.

"I'll tell you what I'll do for you, Tony," said his friend. "Here's a box of cigars I'll give you. Go out and sell 'em. Go ahead."

"All right!" exclaimed Tony. He sold the cigars. With the proceeds he bought more. And so on. He discovered that he was an excellent salesman.

It was not long until he set up a little cigar store of his own. His business thrived. His middle name was Business. He had in his veins the blood of the Profit.

A little while and he had a dozen stores, all doing well.

Then he bought a lot and store building. He sold at an advance. He pursued his real estate operations and was uniformly successful.

One day he came into his bank out of breath, and said to the cashier:

"Say, I want a hundred thousand dollars, and want it quick. Could you let me have it? If I can get it before 3 o'clock I stand to make a big killing. Go on, now; lend it to me."

The cashier looked at him curiously, and smiled. "What do you want to borrow money for, Tony? Do you know how much you have in here?"

"No."

"Your balance is over $250,000."

"Gee!"

"Didn't you know?"

"No. I don't know nothin' about figures. I can't even read and write."

"Good heavens!" cried the cashier. "What might you have been if you had had an education?"

"Well," replied Tony, after a moment's reflection, "I might have been a sexton." —[Frank Crane in the Chicago Daily News.]

NIGHT EDITOR'S GREAT BLUNDER

When He Refused To Take Big Special.

HE DIDN'T APPRECIATE VALUE

Of First News Which Told
Of the Frightful Galveston Flood.

WAS SUMMARILY DISCHARGED

In the July American Magazine Richard Spillane, a newspaper man, writes a fiction story entitled "Through Hurricane and Flood," which contains a thrilling description of the Galveston disaster where dozens of lives were lost. At the end of the story he tells about Spurgeon, a reporter who went through the catastrophe and after a fearful struggle got to a telephone wire prepared to tell the first great story of the flood. At the beginning of the following extract from the story Spurgeon is at the wire talking with the night editor of a great northern newspaper:

"This is Spurgeon from Galveston," he said. "I am just in. The city is in ruins. Thousands are dead. One of the most awful tragedies in the history of the world has occurred. I have the story as well as man can have it at this time. I will send the story out of my head and I will keep going as long as you can take it, or as long as I can send."

"One minute," said the operator; "the night editor is out for breakfast. I will have to send for him."

"I will start up while you are sending for him," said Spurgeon.

"No," said the operator; "wait until he comes in."

"Five minutes, ten minutes, fifteen minutes passed before the night editor returned. Then the operator said to Spurgeon: 'He says the paper has gone to press. Be ready with a good story to-night.'"

"Spurgeon was aghast. Then furiously he asked, 'Did you tell him I am just in from Galveston; that the city is destroyed; that thousands of people are dead there?'"

"The operator said, 'Yes, I have told him all that, and he says the paper is run off now and it is too late. He will take the story to-night.'"

"Spurgeon argued, pleaded, raged. He told the operator to tell the night editor a newspaper had never gone to press when such a story as this 'broke.' He couldn't print enough papers to satisfy the demand this story would create. It was a 'beat,' the beat of the century. Back came the answer: 'No; it is too late. He will take it to-night.'"

"To have such a story spurned after all the horrors of that night was too much for Spurgeon. He began sending bulletins to newspapers far and wide. He sent these bulletins as far east as Boston, as far west as San Francisco, as far south as New Orleans. He played no favorites. He had about thirty minutes' sleep. Then there came a pounding on his door. It was a telegram. Then came more telegrams, and more. The proprietor of a great newspaper in New York telegraphed that he wanted Spurgeon's exclusive services at his own price. Other papers eager to get the details of the great tragedy begged him to send stuff."

"The next day he had a thousand telegrams or more. Among them was one from the Editor-in-Chief of his Northern paper, saying he understood Spurgeon had reached Houston at 3 a. m., in ample time to give the story to his paper; he had chosen to hold it for the Associated Press afternoon papers. The editor did not think Spurgeon had treated the paper fairly and unless he could explain his conduct satisfactorily, the paper wanted nothing more from him."

"A year or so ago, Spurgeon met the great Editor. They chatted for a long time, and then, when the Galveston man was about to go he said, 'There's a question I have been wanting to ask you for many years.'"

"Yes, I know," said the veteran; "you want to know what I said to that night editor."

"Spurgeon nodded. There was wrath in the voice of the old man as he answered, 'I do not know. I never have been able to recall what I said, but he went out of this office and, and—he never returned.'"

HARDNESS OF WATER—

PHYSICAL RESISTANCE

Here is a fact which is probably novel to the average man who has not spent much of his life thinking about motor speed boats. This is what we may call the hardness of the water when a boat is running at speed. Water at 50 miles an hour is not the limpid liquid we are accustomed to bathe in. If you put your arm overboard from a hydroplane running at fifty miles an hour and strike a wave crest the probability is you will break your arm or wrist, because at that speed the water has not time to give, not time even to change shape, and striking it is like striking so much metal.

In the great hydraulic mining nozzles, where a stream of water under enormous head is used to wash down hillsides, a swordsman, in attempting to cut into one of these streams, will shatter the sword without being able to penetrate the water. The stream is like a bar of iron. The fact that water at relative speed is so hard—or that its inertia is so great, to be a little more accurate—is the reason why a skipping stone travels over the surface, and is the reason why a hydroplane boat slides over the surface instead of plowing its way through.

The picture we must have in our minds, then, of a speed boat is that it is traveling not in the water, as we ordinarily understand it, but over the surface of a semisolid, very much as a sled travels over snow.—[American Magazine.]

ENCOUNTER PANTHER ON A WARREN COUNTY FARM

Three Brothers Hunt Animal, and One of Them Has a Narrow Escape.

Bowling Green, Ky., July 24.—Their desire to hunt real "panther" almost led Neale Comfort, aged twenty; Caywood Smith, aged twenty-one, and his brother, Jouett Smith, aged sixteen years, into serious trouble last night when the trio unexpectedly came upon a big wild panther on the farm of Alber Sears, half a mile from Green Hill. But for the timely arrival of the younger brother, Caywood Smith might have fared badly.

Several nights ago Mr. Sears reported that a mule belonging to him had been attacked in the field by a supposed panther. The animal was badly lacerated when found. Last night the three young men decided that they would hunt the panther. It was while the elder Smith was climbing over a fence he spied the panther in the underbrush. Firing from his position on the fence, the recoil of the gun threw the man directly opposite the animal. Instantly it leaped toward him. The younger Smith rushed to the fence and fired at the panther. By this time the elder Smith had recovered his feet and again shot at the approaching animal. The trio were too frightened to give further chase and returned to their homes.

For several nights the neighborhood of Green Hill has been disturbed by the hideous and shrill screaming of the animal. It is thought the panther has its lair in the swamps that abound in that neighborhood. For some time farmers have been finding dead sheep in the fields and have heretofore attributed their death to dogs. It is now thought that the panther has been doing the work. It is proposed to have a big panther hunt shortly with dogs.

THE CITY OF THE FATE OF CALAMITY HOWLERS

Business can create psychological conditions to suit itself or to browbeat an administration it would ruin if it cannot rule. It cannot control material conditions to suit any such purpose.

If there has been a conspiracy to this effect, the big crops are blowing it up and the railroads are hiring back the men they were recently discharging wholesale. The calamity howlers are being swept off their feet. The standpatters are running about with the cry of what can be done to save their exclusive contract with Providence through high tariff in the production of prosperity. And lastly, the Colonel is seen hunting around for that "grave industrial depression and suffering," which he left the Outlook to save the country from.

It is a great pity, in the midst of these glowing promises for the industry of the many, to have to record the havoc wrought to the elect and those who battle for the Lord. But facts are facts.—[New York World.]

WILD FREAKS OF AN IOWA CYCLONE

How It Punishes and Spare Its Victims.

FAIR SAMPLE OF ITS PRANKS

Which Show the Marvelous
Maneuvers Of These Destroyers.

MIRACULOUS ESCAPES RESULT

The American Magazine has been offering prizes for the best letters in a contest entitled "The Best Story I Ever Heard." The prize-winning contributions are published in the August number. Following is an extract from the letter that won second prize. It is a true story of the freaks of an Iowa cyclone:

"Mr. R., his wife, and eight children were living in Iowa, near the city of Grinnell, on as pretty a farm as one would wish to see. After a very hot day, the three littlest folks being fast asleep in bed, the older members of the family sat upon the porch in the early evening, longing for a cooling breeze. The air had been hot and lifeless all day and sunset brought little relief, though gathering clouds gave promise of a cooling shower.

"About eight o'clock a strange rumbling sound startled them; it was not thunder and at once impressed them with a sense of peril. The roar grew louder each minute. A hasty glance to the westward showed a black, funnel-shaped cloud coming toward them with an ominous roar and frightful speed, and with wild cries of 'A cyclone, the cellar!' Mrs. R. caught up the baby, the father seized the two other sleeping children, and all made a frantic rush for the cellar door. The foremost one had scarcely reached it when a terrific crash overwhelmed them. The house was apparently lifted up bodily and dropped, driving some of the timbers into the earth like tent pegs.

"Mr. R. felt himself lifted in the air, and the next minute was roused by a terrifying plunge into cold water, which brought back his scattered senses. He had come down head first into the well! Instantly rising to the top, gasping for breath, he felt something floating on the water. It proved to be his five-year-old son, dazed and frightened, neither of them hurt by their airy flight. The pump had been torn away by the cyclone, leaving a two-inch iron pipe standing straight up in the middle. Raising the boy to his shoulders Mr. R., by the help of the pipe, managed to work his way to the top of the well, a long hard pull, with a mind full of dark forebodings. Making his way over the dismal wreckage of broken timbers and prostrate trees he found his wife with two of the younger children, trembling with terror but unhurt. The eldest daughter came running from the orchard with the baby in her arms; she had found him upon the ground unhurt, and he had not even cried.

"The three boys were calling from the cellar, where they were imprisoned. The stove, organ, and a heavy desk had coasted in when the floor had been dropped askew, and it was a hard task to set them free, but they too, were safe. It is almost unbelievable that a cyclone that had scattered their cozy home along the prairie for a mile or more and had not spared enough to make a respectable henhouse, had left every one of that large family unhurt except for a few minor bruises. The barn was gone, but there stood the thirty head of cattle still tied to the stanchions, only one injured so that it had to be killed, and the two horses unharmed."

A PRIZE TO TEACHERS OF MOONLIGHT SCHOOLS

To the Kentucky teacher who writes the best article or story on "My Moonlight School," the Kentucky Society of Colonial Dames will give the sum of $15.00. The conditions are as follows:

The story must be absolutely true in every detail. It must be written by the teacher who taught such a school.

It must give date of opening, length of term, enrollment, age of youngest and oldest pupil and results.

It must be sent to the Kentucky

Illiteracy Commission, Frankfort, on or before November 1, 1914. The judges will be: Dr. J. G. Crabbe, President H. H. Cherry, Hon. Barksdale Hamlett, Supt. Ella Lewis, Mrs. Cora Wilson Stewart.

POSTMASTER "SHORT" A CENT—HAD TO PAY UP

Seaford, Del., July 25.—Luther H. Clifton, former postmaster at Blades, Del., near here, was threatened with prosecution by the Post-office Department in Washington today because of a shortage of one cent in his accounts. He paid the amount and escaped trouble.

Clifton had been postmaster seventeen years. Last November he was succeeded by Caleb R. Cannon. When the office was transferred the accounts were examined. It was impossible to learn the amount of cancellations.

It is on this that the postmaster's salary is based. Finally the report of the expert accountant showed the Government owed the retiring official one cent. To-day notice was received that he owed one cent instead. Clifton paid the money to his successor and took his receipt.

SKELETON OF A FORMER CRIME HELD BEFORE HIM

With Threats of Exposure, Caused Bookkeeper To Steal,
He Claims.

New York, June 24.—The story of how an ex-convict whose efforts to lead a straight life were balked by threats of exposure if he did not steal from his employers, was unfolded to-day in General Sessions when John T. Hayden, of Brooklyn, was brought up for sentence before Judge Crain. He had confessed to stealing $18,000 from E. T. Babbitt & Co., where he had been employed as a bookkeeper for the last two years.

Hayden was formerly with the Armour-Swift Company, and while in their employ he stole over $35,000. He was sentenced to from one to five years in the penitentiary. But his good conduct in prison obtained his release after one year.

"I was determined," he told Judge Crain to-day, "to lead an honest life for the sake of my wife and two children. My salary was $35 a week, and we lived comfortably and happily until one day when I met William Arnold on the street. He had been a salesman with the Armour-Swift people when I was employed there and he knew my past. 'Unfortunately I revealed to him the fact that my employers knew nothing about what I had done years before. He tried to induce me to steal from them and when I refused he threatened me with exposure. I knew that that would mean my instant discharge and so I finally agreed.'"

Believing Hayden's story, Judge Crain sentenced him to only two and a half years instead of the ten years he would have received otherwise.

Arnold now is in the Tombs under an indictment charging forgery and receiving stolen goods.

LINCOLN COUNTY IS FIGHTING ILLITERACY

Lincoln county, which wrote a brilliant page in Kentucky's history through its representative in the last General Assembly, Hon. Shelton M. Saufley, who championed the bill creating the Kentucky Illiteracy Commission, has written another. Superintendent Garland Singleton and forty-six of his teachers have volunteered to teach moonlight schools to wipe out illiteracy.

The Stanford Interior Journal and the people of Lincoln county are backing these volunteers enthusiastically.

His Handicap.

"The baseball player is different from all other workers."

"In what way?"

"Nobody ever sympathizes with him when he goes out on a strike."

—[Baltimore American.]

That Was Different.

"I understand," said the aristocratic stranger, "that you have a Blackfriars Club in your town."

"Yes. It is composed of colored cooks."

Was In Luck.

"Well, old man, how did you get along after I left you at midnight? Get home all right?"

"No! A confounded nosy policeman haled me to the station, where I spent the rest of the night."

"Lucky dog! I reached home."

Simple, But Striking.

Maiden—What sort of a hat did Genevieve Gotham wear?

Man—A simple thing—just a gardenia in front and a gol-darn-ye behind.

HIGH PRICE OF HUSBANDS GIVEN

As Cause For Epidemic
Of Suicides

AMONG YOUNG BENGAL GIRLS

Who Provoke Outbursts Of Admiration For Their "Heroic" Action.

WIDOWHOOD MUCH DREADED

The Statesman of this city prints the following paragraph:

"It appears that quite a new spirit has arisen among the girlhood of the Bengal race. Bengal has of late witnessed with astonishment akin to a feeling of reverence and admiration a number of cases of self-immolation of tender Bengal girls."

What this Hindu writer thus complacently describes is in reality a curious epidemic of suicide. It began some weeks ago with the self-destruction of a girl named Snehahata, whose father was about to mortgage his property in order to pay the purchase price of a husband for her.

The sum now demanded by the fathers of eligible boys in Bengal is ruinously high. The price of a Kaysath who has graduated may go up to 10,000 rupees ($3,300). 3,000 rupees is a quite usual demand, and even a matriculate can command 500 rupees. The enhancement of rates is due to the law of supply and demand. Girls must ordinarily be married before puberty, while the increasing requirements of education have led to the postponement of the marriage of boys. There is thus a diminishing supply of husbands, whereas the demand is unchanged.

The suicide of Snehahata, who poured kerosene oil over her clothing and set herself on fire, provoked an outburst of admiration among marriage reformers and the fathers of marriageable girls. The natural result is that other young girls have followed the example of Snehahata, while it is common talk among school girls that when the time comes for their marriage they will sacrifice themselves in the same way.

The mania has not confined itself to victims of the husband's dowry. The widow of a wealthy young Jemadar burned herself to death, leaving an orphan child. More recently, as the correspondent already mentioned relates, we have had "the heroic sacrifice of yet another tender Bengal girl at this prosaic railway town of Saidour."

The girl's husband died of smallpox. Six days later she saturated her clothing with kerosene and set it alight. The admiring chronicler is divided between two methods of accounting for the tragedy. On the one hand, he ascribes it to her affection for her husband; on the other, he suggests that the girl, "though of tender years, realized but too truly what a lifelong widowhood meant for her."

In these days of legislative councils and royal commissions on the civil service, it is not always realized that the inhuman treatment of the Hindu widow remains unaltered and unmitigated, and that her most cheerful prospect is a life of prostitution.—[Calcutta Cor. New York Times.]
